£Attractive Package + Car + bonus + relocation

Meeting and surpassing the exacting and challenging demands of the automotive, construction and yellow goods sectors, Corus is at the forefront of technological development in this area. As Product Manager, you will spearhead our cross-functional teams in the strategic development, management and delivery of the technology roadmap for a product portfolio throughout its life-cycle, from product introduction to withdrawal.

This post demands an innovator who is prepared to challenge existing practices and strive towards continuous improvement, whilst maximising the margin for the business on a sustainable basis. Your wide ranging remit will include formulating KPI's, recommending product policy on key transactional parameters, championing customer issues and interfacing closely with the commercial, manufacturing, technical and supply chain teams on tactical issues to optimise the product mix.

You should be educated to degree level, preferably within a science subject and possess demonstrable industry expertise with proven proficiency in a technical, scientific or business management field. Excellent communication, influencing and motivational skills will complement a flair for innovation, project management and leadership.

In return, we offer an attractive salary package including a final salary pension scheme, 35 days holiday, private medical insurance, performance related pay and a generous bonus arrangement based on business performance.
